Perhaps Best Known German American In Country.

New York, Nov. 1.-Herman Ridder, former treasurer of the Democratic national committee and publisher of the New Yorker Staats Zeitung, died suddenly late today in his home ni this city of an acute form of kidney disease. He had been ill about ten months and two weeks past his condition had been critical. He was in his sixty-fifth year.

Members of his family were sum moned to the bedside late today when it was seen he could last little longer and were with him when he died.

Among a great many leading German-American citizens of the United States, Herman Ridder was one of the most conspicuous figures in the newspaper publishing business and fit politics. His associates in the publishing business honored him at one time with the presidency of the Amer ican Newspaper Publishers' association, and for many years he held high offices in the Associated Press as treasurer and director. In politics he was such a factor that he was talked of at the National Democratic convention in Denver in 1908, as a possible nominee for vice presient on the ticket with Bryan, whom, however, Mr. Ridder opposed at that time. He al so was discussed later as a likely selection for ambassador to Germany.
